Pruden.

Special to the News.
Louis Hall was slightly hurt in the mines Thursday.

Dady Bates was sporting a new suit Sunday. Lookout girls, dady will get out among them.

Big ball game. Fonde vs. Pruden. Batteries, Write and Hix for Pruden, and Pratt and Nickerson for Fonde. The game was the best ever played at this place. The score was 1 to 1 in favor of Pruden. Pruden scored 1 in first inning, and Fonde scored 1 in 8th inning, which tied the game. The game was held a tie until the 15th inning with Page on 3rd base and Speaks on 2nd. Bates, of Pruden, came up with a nice little single, which scored Page and put Speaks on 3rd. Bates stole 2nd and Hix came to bat and pulled a line drive to left and scored Speaks and Bates which made the game 1 to 1 in favor of Pruden. The game ran nicely all the way through without many errors on either side. Pruden got seven hits, while Fonde got six hits. Louis Hall called the game, as he was not able to play, and he sure did call a fair and square game. There wasn't an unfair decision on either side, and both sides were satisfied. Fonde doesn't like to be beat but it can't be helped this time. Cheer up, boys, we might let you beat us next time.

Hoping this may find a little corner in the News, I am,
Billy Possom.

Bought Mountain Farm.

A. L. Rankin has purchased the farm on Cumberland mountain at the Horse-shoe, formerly owned by Chris Wagner, and is summing there. The property to this he has purchased from Albert Wallace five hundred acres of adjacent land. He uses an auto in going to and from his farm and reports the mountain road good travelling.

PRESIDENT WILSON STATES HIS REASONS FOR APPOINTING BRANDEIS

In response to an inquiry from Senator Culberson, asking the president for the reasons actuating him in making the nomination of Mr. Brandeis for associate justice of the Supreme court, the president sent the following letter:

The White House, Washington, May 5, 1916.

My Dear Senator: I am very much obliged to you for giving me an opportunity to make clear to the judiciary committee my reasons for nominating Mr. Louis D. Brandeis to fill the vacancy in the Supreme court of the United States created by the death of Mr. Justice Lamar, for I am profoundly interested in the confirmation of the appointment by the senate.

There is probably no more important duty imposed upon the president in connection with the general administration of the government than that of naming members of the Supreme court, and I need hardly tell you that I named Mr. Brandeis as a member of that great tribunal only because I knew him to be singularly qualified by learning, by gifts, and by character for the position.

Many charges have been made against Mr. Brandeis. The report of your subcommittee has already made it plain to you and to the country at large how unfounded those charges were. They threw a great deal more light upon the character and motives of those with whom they originated than upon the qualifications of Mr. Brandeis. I myself looked into them three years ago, when I desired to make Mr. Brandeis a member of my cabinet, and found that they proceeded for the most part from those who hated Mr. Brandeis because he had refused to be servicable to them in the promotion of their own selfish interests, and from those whom they had prejudiced and misled. The propaganda in this matter has been very extraordinary and very distressing to those who love fairness and value the dignity of the great professions.

I perceived from the first that the charges were intrinsically incredible by anyone who had really known Mr. Brandeis. I have known him. I have tested him by seeking his advice upon some of the most difficult and perplexing public questions about which it was necessary for me to form a judgment. I have dealt with him in matters where nice questions of honor and fair play, as well as large questions of justice and the public benefit were involved.

In every matter in which I have made test of his judgment and point of view I have received from him counsel singularly enlightening, singularly clear-sighted and judicial, and, above all, full of moral stimulation. He is a friend of all just men and a lover of the right; and he knows more than how to talk about the right—he knows how to set it forward in the face of his enemies. I knew, from direct personal knowledge of the man, what I was doing when I named him for the highest and most responsible tribunal of the nation.

Lauds His Ability.

Of his extraordinary ability as a lawyer no man who is competent to judge can speak with anything but the highest admiration. You will remember that in the opinion of the late Chief Justice Fuller he was the ablest man who ever appeared before the Supreme court of the United States. "He is also," the chief justice added, "absolutely fearless in the discharge of his duties."

Those who have resorted to him for assistance in settling great industrial disputes can testify to his fairness and love of justice. In the troublesome controversies between the garment workers and manufacturers of New York city, for example, he gave a truly remarkable proof of his judicial temperament, and had what must have been the great satisfaction of rendering decisions which both sides were willing to accept as disinterested and even-handed.

Mr. Brandeis has rendered many notable services to the city and state with which his professional life has been identified. He successfully directed the difficult campaign which resulted in obtaining cheaper gas for the city of Boston. It was chiefly under his guidance and through his efforts that legislation was secured in Massachusetts which authorized savings banks to issue insurance policies for small sums at much reduced rates.

And some gentlemen who tried very hard to obtain control by the Boston Elevated Railway company of the subways of the city for a period of 99 years can probably testify as to his ability as the people's advocate when public interests call for an effective champion. He rendered these services without compensation, and earned, whether he got it or not, the gratitude of every citizen of the state and city he served. These are but a few of the services of this kind he has freely rendered. It will hearten friends of community and public rights throughout the country to see his quality singularly recognized by his elevation to the Supreme bench. For the whole country is aware of his quality and is interested in this appointment.

I did not, in making choice of Mr.

Brandeis, ask for or depend upon "endorsements." I acted upon public knowledge and personal acquaintance with the man, and preferred to name a lawyer for this great office whose abilities and character were so widely recognized that he needed no endorsement. I did, however, personally consult many men in whose judgment I had great confidence, and am happy to say was supported in my selection by the voluntary recommendation of the attorney general of the United States, who urged Mr. Brandeis upon my consideration independently of any suggestion from me.

Let me say, by way of summing up, my dear senator, that I nominated Mr. Brandeis for the Supreme court because it was and is my deliberate judgment that, of all the men now at the bar whom it has been my privilege to observe, test, and know, he is exceptionally qualified. I cannot speak too highly of his impartial, impersonal, orderly, and constructive mind; his rare analytical powers, his deep human sympathy, his profound acquaintance with the historical roots of our institutions and insight into their spirit, or of the many evidences he has given of being imbued, to the very heart, with our American ideals of justice and equality of opportunity; of his knowledge of modern economic conditions, and of the way they bear upon the masses of the people, or of his genius in getting persons to unite in common and harmonious action and look with frank and kindly eyes into each other's minds, who had before been heated antagonists.

This friend of justice and of men will ornament the high court of which we are all so justly proud. I am glad to have the opportunity to pay him this tribute of admiration and of confidence; and I beg that your committee will accept this nomination as coming from me, quick with a sense of public obligation and responsibility. With warmest regard, cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

The Hon. Charles A. Culberson, United States Senate.

RAY STANNARD BAKER CONSIDERS BRANDEIS INQUIRY AS AN OLD-FASHIONED HERESY TRIAL.

In the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in the course of a detailed analysis of the hearing regarding Mr. Brandeis' fitness for appointment to the Supreme court, Ray Stannard Baker writes:

"I confess that a layman finds himself somewhat puzzled as to what is the real view among lawyers themselves concerning the conduct proper to a lawyer and prospective judge like Mr. Brandeis. Two widely different, and, as it seems to the layman, contradictory views appear to prevail among them. Indeed, the inquiry at Washington has sometimes seemed to the observer like an old-fashioned heresy trial with good and honorable men disputing doctrinal points and with Mr. Brandeis himself as the charged heretic."

"A few of the high priests of the legal profession have appeared to oppose Mr. Brandeis; others, like the faculty of the Harvard law school, who know him well, have appeared to support and commend him. Are these professors heretical too?"

"The five-per-cent rate case is more or less typical of the charges brought against Mr. Brandeis and raises the question squarely as to whether it is really a heresy for a lawyer to be honest with judges, commissions and the public. Must a lawyer be oblivious to the public aspects of the problems which are presented to him? Shall a lawyer seek justice and truth, or shall he be honest only with clients who pay him for it?"

"A careful investigation of all the cases presented at the Brandeis inquiry can be shown, I think, to turn upon this vital difference in view as to the lawyer's real job; and that Mr. Brandeis' method was to take the higher course—as he saw it—the higher course which is often so difficult, complex and dangerous to follow."

"I have called the senate inquiry a heresy trial; but Mr. Brandeis is a heretic only as regards what seems to be certain twisted and contorted conceptions of the duty of the lawyer. The nobler vision of the legal profession makes its members always seekers for the truth of the matter, always as eager to secure justice as to win a case."

"It seems to the layman that the desire to arrive at the truth in every case presented, which has been so clearly the characteristic of Mr. Brandeis' method, is the very essence of the judicial temperament and furnishes the soundest possible reason why he should be confirmed. A man with his peculiar kind of heresy is the best kind of man in the high court of the nation."

Hair Cut Slow in London.

It takes twice as long to get your hair cut in London as it did before the war. In itself this loss of time can scarcely be called momentous, but as a symptom it is significant of a great deal. The fact that London barbers are reducing their staffs and have to fall back upon inexperienced assistance is a single illustration of industrial changes that are going on everywhere. Let me give a few examples from my personal knowledge. The other day the spring of the paper carriage of my typewriter broke and I took the machine to a leading firm of typewriter repairers to get it mended. It is more than a month before I got it. They explained that they had ten men left out of a normal of about fifty.

Dallas Texas.

Special to the News.

Esteemed editor and readers, it is always a big job to select a subject that will be of interest to the readers of the News.

I have just returned from a pleasant visit to T. S. Bracken's, of Arlington, Texas. I enjoyed the trip very much and the recreation did me much good. Tom knows just how to kill the blues and his family all fall in line to make one realize that this old world is not so bad to live when one can meet up with such good entertainers as Tom and his good wife and family.

We had the pleasure of meeting and shaking the hand of a good friend of many years standing this morning, our old friend, A. L. Pitts, of Dallas. True enough we both live in the same city, but in a city is the easiest place in the world to lose anyone, and it is just occasionally that I meet Mr. Pitts. I told him he looked old and ugly, but I do not think he believed me. Anyway, Lavender is the kind that makes one feel better to spend a few moments with.

What is the matter with "Oklahoma Jack." He has not shown up for some time. Come on, "Jack" Several of the old reliables have been lying off. Come on and bear your part of the burden. If you want to feel good and have the world to smile at you, do your part and smile at others. Let's all try to finish the last of the first half of 1916 all to the good and continue the good work thru the remaining half.

I am not posted on the war this week as I have not read the paper very much for the last few weeks.

The State and Country Political pot is getting pretty warm. We may expect some hot times from now until after the November election. I have just received and read the many good letters from the different points back there. I am glad to see so many letters, and, remember correspondents, that when you speak of any individual, that means something to someone. We the old settlers of the old home country are always expecting to hear from some dear friend thru the columns of the good old News. Always remember you are doing a kindness for someone when you write a good letter to the News. I was disappointed when I did not see a letter from "J. G."

I was very glad to see the kind words from my tried and true friend, "Old Joe." I can not say what I will do in the future. I will let you know in time to meet me at the train.

"Brown Eyes," of Whitwell, I would like to furnish you some of those delicious melons. Since the last letter, nice red-sided peaches and plums have appeared on the market.

Come to Texas where it is almost perpetual summer, where the mocking bird sings twelve months in the year. Tell your best fellow if he brings you to the best city in the best state it will be Dallas, Texas.

I was sorrow to see the account of the death of Dr. Smith, of Dunlap. Dr. Smith, at one time was one of my best friends and was up to the time of my leaving the old valley. Not that our feelings ever had any occasion to change but distance sometimes has a tendency to end an acquaintance of long standing. I first got acquainted with Dr. Smith in 1874.

I hope to hear from several places next week that have been silent for some time.

I received a letter today from the Woodman Circle of condolence and respect, for which I am very proud and will send them a reply by their next meeting.

Best of wishes to the Editor of the News and the big army of its readers. Now, lay me down to sleep.

Saving the Cornstalks.

A census of Kankakee county, Illinois, taken thru the schools, shows that not a single farmer burned his stalks this spring. Two or three years ago cornstalk bonfires were a common sight in Kankakee county in the spring. Since then the county advisor has been talking of the value of cornstalks as a source of organic matter, and the result is that the wasteful practice of burning the stalks has been entirely eliminated. A similar census shows that 75 per cent of the Kankakee county farmers treated their oats for smut this spring. All of which means that Kankakee county farmers are wide-awake and looking for opportunities to add to their farm profits.—Prairie Farmer.
